Preschools receive glowing marks

A new study gives high marks to San Francisco preschools.

The study by the RAND Corporation found that preschools in The City outshined national scores by an average of 25 percent.

The study also gave acknowledgment to the success of First 5 of San Francisco's Preschool for All program.

"This is a proud day for San Francisco," Mayor Gavin Newsom said in a press release. "This research shows that our investments are paying off in a big way." — Staff report
